Media Mania Continuing Education
presents

Movie-making at the Zoo

This exciting 2-day activity brings the children to the zoo and the world of movie-making! They will discover what the zookeeper does, how animals in the zoo are kept healthy and happy, and capture the scenes with a digital video camera.

On the second day, the children will meet at the Science Discovery Centre, Hall 6, to do their movie editing and the session will end off with a Zoo Oscars Ceremony. Participants who complete the 2-day activity will be presented Certificates of Participation while the best three will be awarded prizes.

Children will have fun working as a movie-making team – acting, directing, filming, editing and coming up with their own story! Register now as places are limited.

Section F: Comprehension MCQ (5 x 1m = 5m)

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

A powerful earthquake, registering 7.2 on the Richter scale, hit the western part of Japan on 7th January, 1995, at 0546 hours (Japan time). Its epicentre was about twenty kilometres beneath Awaji Island, some thirty kilometres from Kobe.

It was Japan's worst earthquake since a very powerful one struck eastern Japan in 1923. The 1995 earthquake had inflicted the greatest loss of life and damage to buildings, roads, bridges and railways in Kobe and the coastal cities nearest to Awaji Island. Osaka, Japan's second largest city, also suffered significant damage, bringing the death toll to just over five hundred.

Japan is an earthquake-prone country but the area around Kobe had not been known to be a danger zone. It is therefore surprising that an earthquake of this magnitude should hit the area.

There are quite a number of seismographs and sensors that detect earth tremors throughout Japan. These instruments are supposed to help earthquake researchers predict earthquakes. On an early warning, people could be evacuated to safer places. It was disappointing that in the case of the Kobe earthquake, no early warning had been given.

Unexpectedly, many of the newer roads and buildings were badly damaged. These roads and buildings had been engineered and constructed to withstand earthquakes. Fortunately, the Kobe nuclear power plant managed to escape damage. If radioactivity had leaked as a result of the damage to the plant, it would have triggered off severe and long-lasting damage on health and the environment.

The Kobe earthquake inflicted such massive damage that reconstruction would be long and arduous. The early-warning system too has been receiving the extra attention it needs, especially so because a big one is expected to strike the Tokyo region in the next twenty to thirty years, according to earthquake researchers.

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

26. When the Kobe earthquake struck, most of the people in the region were probably _____.
- (1) still in bed
 - (2) going to work
 - (3) returning from work
 - (4) having their lunch breaks
27. The Kobe earthquake caused much damage and loss of life because it _____.
- (1) had struck coastal areas
 - (2) had struck suburban areas
 - (3) had hit Japan's second largest city
 - (4) was Japan's worst earthquake since 1923
28. Which one of the following statements is true?
- (1) Osaka was the hardest hit city.
 - (2) The Kobe earthquake was expected.
 - (3) Radioactivity leaked from the Kobe nuclear plant.
 - (4) The Japanese were not prepared for the Kobe earthquake.
29. The newer Kobe roads and buildings were not expected to suffer much damage because they were _____.
- (1) in coastal areas
 - (2) modern structures
 - (3) supposed to be earthquake-proof
 - (4) far away from the earthquake's epicentre
30. The earthquake researchers in Japan have since been working to improve the early-warning system because _____.
- (1) sensors were effective in detecting tremors
 - (2) there is a fear of leakage at the Kobe nuclear plant
 - (3) the neighbouring countries have been pressuring them to do so
 - (4) a major earthquake is expected to strike in the next two or three decades

Section K: comprehension Open-ended (10 x 2m = 20m)

Read the passage below carefully and answer questions 71 to 80.

It was a sparkling clear December morning. The land around was flat, much of it parched and open. A few rice fields were fenced and bordered with coconut and palm trees. Kevin and I were watching with fascination as our two companions stalked silently.

5 Itu walked with his eyes on the ground, missing no clues. His ten-year-old son, Raja, tiptoed along behind. We moved closer when Itu stopped to study a rat hole. The moist clay bore the perfect impression of a snake's belly. "It's a medium-sized cobra," said Itu. "Probably a female. It was out at night, probably hunting and entered 10 the hole before dawn." We were impressed but not surprised at all.

Itu used a crowbar to dig. The instant he saw the snake's tail, he grabbed it and stepped back with one quick motion, hauling out a metre-long cobra, its neck flared in fright. The hunter pinned the hissing head to the ground with the steel bar, then gently slipped his 15 prize into a bag. It would not do to injure the snake. It was destined for the Snake Park.

Such was the life-style of Itu, who was from the tribe of the Iralus. Unfortunately, this life-style is being eroded, bit by bit. Urban sprawl, the conversion of forests into land for housing, and pollution 20 are both making it more and more difficult for Iralus to survive as hunters. Kevin and I were interested in the tribe's plight and wanted to help them find ways of adapting to their changing environment.

Another trip out with Itu and Raja in search of snakes yielded an unexpected bonus. Raja climbed up a tree and came down with a 25 honeycomb, which we all shared. The Iralus ate the baby bees as well as the honey. Later, we waded through a weed-choked canal to watch

Raja hunt water snakes. He used a stick to tickle a crab hole in the muddy embankment until a fat water snake dived out. Raja snatched up the thrashing reptile and was bitten on the hand. The bite was not 30 poisonous but it was painful.

Like all Iralu snake catchers, Itu disdained hospitals and modern medical treatment. Instead, he placed his trust in his herbal mixture called veley, a greenish tea which he prepared himself from bark and herbs, and gulped it down. The Iralus believed the 35 potion is an antidote for snakebite.. Itu had used the antidote and had survived ten cobra bites. Itu's way of curing poisonous bites by using bark and herbs might seem useless to a Westerner but to an Iralu, this is the only cure, the most effective one.

(Extracted from National Geographic June issue 2001)

For each question from 71 to 80, write your answers in the Answer Booklet. ALL ANSWERS MUST BE IN COMPLETE SENTENCES.

71. Which two-word phrase in the first paragraph (lines 1 to 4) tells us that the people were moving quietly?
72. What did the narrator mean when he said Itu 'walked with his eyes on the ground' (line 5)?
73. How did Itu know the snake was hiding in the rat hole?
74. Name two pieces of equipment that Itu brought along for the hunt.
75. After catching the snake, why do you think Itu was careful not to injure the snake?
76. What did Itu do for a living?
77. Explain clearly how the "Urban sprawl" (line 18-19) affected the lives of the Iralus drastically.
78. What was the "bonus" mentioned in line 24? Explain clearly why it was considered a bonus.
79. The narrator states that Itu disdained hospitals and medical treatment (line 31-32). Explain clearly how Itu treated his cobra bites.
80. How do we know that the antidote Itu used could cure snakebites?
