2. Do not turn over the page until you are told to do so.
3. Follow all instructions carefully.
4. Answer all questions.
5. Shade your answers in the Optical Answer Sheet (OAS) provided.

Study the brochure carefully and answer questions 1 to 5.

For 7 to 12 years old kids

Kids vs Wild Science

Have you ever wondered what you can do in an emergency?
How can you survive if you get lost in the wild?
Let our 2-day camp teach you how Science can help you use the things around you to be the ultimate outdoor survivor!

Our experienced staff will guide you to learn survival skills. Gain knowledge of the key elements needed for survival in the outdoors unaided by modern tools.

Lots of exciting activities that will make you want more!

Treasure Hunt

Can't find your way around? Learn how to use the sun or the stars to help you navigate your way around to find our special treasure trove.

Drink Me Up

Thirsty? Learn a host of ways to get clean water from any source: the sea, rivers or even a muddy pool!

Wild Edibles

Hungry? Learn how to identify wild edible plants for food.

Keep Me Warm

Feeling cold? Learn to start fire using friction.

Limited Places Available

Fee: $120 per child

Date: Participants can choose from any of the following:

Camp	Date/Day
A	12 June 2013(Wed) & 13 June 2013(Thurs)

Delegates from all over the world will be attending a three-day toilet conference in Singapore.

It may sound (21) ridiculous. As the world (22) wrestles with international terrorism, so much time and effort here in Singapore will be spent discussing public toilets. China, which is keen to promote a (23) positive image of having clean restroom facilities, is sending twenty delegates.

Conservation will also be an important topic of discussion, about how best to provide a good service to the public in parts of the world where water might be (24) scarce.

Singapore is the perfect host for such a conference. A country known to the world for being squeaky clean where the authorities regularly fine people who do not flush public toilets. The government has said clean public toilets reflect the (25) status of a gracious society.

Blank Page

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

As the white van noses down the dirt tracks above Inanda Dam outside Durban, people emerge from the mud and cinder block houses, waving. Like the dogs bounding eagerly at their heels, many are thin and bear the ravages of illness, but they all smile as they greet the driver of the van: Dog Lady, Angel of the Valley.

Silver-haired Durban grandmother, Jenny Konigkramer, 57, returns their greetings. She addresses each by name, and when she pulls over and climbs out, she bends to fuss over each dog. 5

"Your five are looking in much better condition, John?" she tells a man in blue overalls. Like most in the valley, he is unemployed. Jenny and her part-time helper, Anna Hlope, 38, heft a bag of dog pellets from the van. John takes off his cap in delight, then crouches and opens a corner of the bag to treat his five dogs to a handful. He disappears in a blur of wagging tails and Jenny drives on. "It's this that keeps me coming back," she says. 10

Jenny has been at it for six years, since the day she accompanied her domestic worker, Queenie, to her home here to see her sick dog. "I was nervous at first, there's so much talk of crime, but the people were friendly. And the suffering I saw opened my eyes." Queenie's dog had advanced canine distemper and had to be put down by Jenny's vet. "There were so many others with distemper and other problems, I knew I had to go back." 15

Jenny has a long-held passion for animals. "With this, I knew I could make a difference." She scrounges supplies from donors – damaged bags of pellets, dog bowls, blankets and old kennels. She also takes dozens of animals to SPCA each month to be sterilised or treated for injury or illness. 20

"No one else does this for us," says Pasha, a young taxi driver. His first dog was killed by a car on the road. His second, an exuberant black puppy he calls Snoopy, had washboard ribs and a sore on his neck caused by fleas when Jenny first saw him. She brought antibiotics and a bottle of the flea and tick dip she mixed herself, and showed Pasha how to use it. "Jenny talks nicely, she opens our eyes," says Pasha as Snoopy jumps up and licks her to thank her for curing him of fleas. 25

Tick-borne bilialy, rabies and kennel cough are just some of the problems here. Worse, to Jenny, are cases of cruelty. "I've seen hunting dogs caught in their owners' own snares with horrific limp injuries and several burnings and stabbings." Sometimes these animals have to be put down, and Jenny stays with them and strokes them to the end. 30

"But this work can be as traumatic as rewarding," Jenny confesses. 35

Section K – Comprehension (10 x 2 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 71 to 80.

Most young girls would hate living on an isolated rock surrounded by water, but not shy Ida Lewis. The 15-year-old was glad when her father was appointed the lighthouse keeper of Lime Rock. Now, he would be home with his family all the time.

It was in June, 1857, that the Lewis family moved to Lime Rock. The tiny island stood about 280 metres out in the Newport, Rhode Island, harbour. It barely poked its craggy head through the waters of Narragansett Bay, but the water around it was turbulent and it was very dangerous to incoming boats. 5

Though Ida had lived near the sea all her life, she knew very little about boats. However, she learned quickly as every weekday, she had to row herself, her two younger brothers, and sister to the mainland to attend school. The distance was not very far, but often the boat would bob like a cork in the water. 10

Ida also learned to tend the light. For long periods, during gloomy weather or storms, the light was kept burning both day and night. 15

Four happy months went by for Ida. Then tragedy struck. Mr Lewis suffered a stroke that left him paralysed. Mrs Lewis was appointed lighthouse keeper in his place.

One day, she called Ida to her. "Ida," she said, "you will have to quit school. I cannot care for the light and your father too. I need your help." Ida did not complain but continued her daily struggle with the choppy waves to row her siblings to school. She also had to buy supplies for the light and groceries for the family. 20

As Ida was walking on the rocky shore one evening, she heard faint cries from over the choppy waters. Peering through the dusk, she could make out an overturned sailboat in the distance and someone was clinging to it! 25

Without thinking of danger, Ida got into her boat and was soon skimming across the water to the rescue. When she reached the sailboat, she found not one but four young men clinging to it.

Ida pulled the four into her boat and headed for shore. She had rescued three teenagers and a twenty-year-old. They were very frightened and amazed to see a young girl at the oars of the rescue boat. 30

"Please, please, don't tell anyone about this," Ida implored them shyly. Ida felt that anyone in the same quagmire would have done the same. The youths promised to keep the rescue a secret. 35

From then on, Ida kept a watchful eye for anyone in trouble in the water.

Once, she saved three farmers whose sheep had fallen into the bay. The three had borrowed a boat to pursue the sheep but the tide carried them farther and farther out. Then the boat filled with water and started to sink. In only a few minutes, Ida was taking the drowning men into her boat. After she had left them on shore, she went back and saved the sheep. 40

It was Ida's rescue on July 25, 1869, that brought her courageous feats to the attention of the nation and the world. It was late afternoon. Cold rain and high waves drenched Lime Rock. Ida sat before the fire, her head bent over some sewing. Suddenly, her mother scampered down from the lighthouse shrieking, "Someone is drowning! Someone is drowning!" At once, Ida jumped to the rescue. 45

Never had Ida's courage been so tested. The rain blinded her. Her hands became freezing cold. It took all her strength to force the little boat into the wind as the waves almost swamped it. 50

This time Ida's rescue saved two soldiers. Over and over the soldiers thanked Ida for saving them. There was no way that Ida could keep this rescue a secret. The soldiers told everyone. Newspapers and magazines published the story. When Ida learnt of this, she went red in the face. Subsequently, she received letters from all over the United States and England. She was also given several awards and a life-saving medal. 55

Ida Lewis was famous.
