Thomas was excited. It was Saturday. His parents had promised to take him out shopping for the upcoming Chinese New Year. He could not wait to buy new clothes. The last time he went to Orchard Road was during Christmas when he bought a new set of stationery and some comic books from a bookshop. They even had some ice-cream after shopping.

5

It was the weekend and there were many people shopping in preparation for the New Year. Thomas's parents told him to stay close to them. As they were walking in New Point Mall, Thomas could not help but stare at all the beautiful toys on display in front of the toy shop.

"Mum, can we please go to the toy shop?" Thomas begged.

10

He tugged at his mother's skirt, trying to get her attention but she ignored him. Thinking that they would be close by, he dashed towards the toy shop to have a quick look.

Beads of perspiration trickled down his forehead as he continued to search for his parents. Realising that he had indeed lost his parents, Thomas burst into tears.

Some shoppers stopped and tried to calm him down. As they were coaxing him, a security guard, who was doing his rounds stopped by.

"Excuse me, is there something wrong?" the security guard asked.
