Richard looked around eagerly when he got off the bus. He could tell from the expressions on their faces that the rest of the scouts were equally excited about the hike.

The boys were divided into groups of five. Richard was the leader of his group. He was given a map, a whistle and a compass. There was a route marked out on the map for the group to take. The meeting point was in the middle of the forest, where they would pitch their tents and spend the night. 5

The boys set off after being reminded to stick to the marked route. Richard looked at the compass and headed north. The rest of the boys followed. The hike was rather uneventful until they came to a stream, which they had to cross. They carried their backpacks over their heads and waded across it carefully. 10

Suddenly, one of the scouts, Eric, lost his footing and fell into the water. He began to jump around, saying that there was something cold and slippery squirming down his back. Richard put his hand down Eric's back and pulled a shiny scaly wriggling object out, exclaiming, "It's just a fish!" Everyone burst out laughing. 15
