Section C: Comprehension 1 (8 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 17 - 23.

Being confined to a motorised wheelchair since young has never dampened Mark's spirit. He was always hopeful and eager to make friends with those around him. His classmates, especially Eddie, appreciated his good-natured personality and always included him in group activities. Eddie excelled at sports. Mark longed to be like him, unrestricted by the limitations of his body.

During the school's Sports Day, everyone was invited to participate in the final race of the day. Eddie, who had just completed the relay race, decided to participate in the closing event. Eddie was about to reach the finishing line in the final race when he turned his head to look behind him.

At the back of the crowd was Mark, panting and struggling to complete the race in his wheelchair. Mark still had more than half the distance to cover. Seeing his friend's struggle, Eddie jogged back towards Mark to cheer him on. Eddie knew, there and then, that giving his friend the encouragement he needed was more important than winning the race. The progress was slow, but in the end, Eddie and Mark crossed the finishing line together. The spectators cheered enthusiastically and applauded for them. Mark's determination and Eddie's unwavering support taught the spectators many lessons that day.

Section G: Open-ended Comprehension 2 (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 40 - 48.

Spending some time volunteering is a rewarding experience. Volunteering is something that one does to help others for a good cause without expecting anything in return. Volunteering is an eye-opening encounter as it makes us realise there are others facing various personal challenges. It is a good reminder for us to be grateful for what we have. It is also heartwarming to know that our actions can make lives better for those around us.

Sometimes through volunteering, we need to work in groups. As we put our heads together to solve the challenges, we learn more about cooperation. This handy life skill enables us to work and get along well with others.

Contrary to the belief that volunteering is time-consuming, it does not need to be carried out regularly. It can also be a fun activity especially if we volunteer in causes that are close to our hearts – like helping out at an animal shelter or baking cookies for a charity sale. To make it even more meaningful, we can gather help from friends and family. That way, we can spend some quality time with them while spreading kindness together.

It does not matter if you are distributing food to the needy or a simple act of watering your neighbour's plants while he is away. Any time spent volunteering towards a good cause is very much welcome. Remember volunteering makes a difference in the lives of others and it helps us to grow as a person.
